“Player likeness” is a focus of the new game engine, and is where the entire team at EA Vancouver have focused their attention. A combination of player motion data and data gathered from motion capture studies is used to accurately model player appearance. The process, which is ongoing, includes improvements to the player models, new animation systems, a new animation editor and a new facial animation system. “Player likeness” also features a new player reactions engine. This produces a more lifelike experience for players within the context of dynamic environments and up to four players on-screen at once. This is especially apparent in moments of high intensity, like chipped goals, or sprinting down the field. The “player likeness” concept is similar to the one present in FUT, where players can move like real world players. Such features include “skinning,” which enables players to move from 1 to 14 (from age 17 to 21), an element that is also used in FIFA to describe what your player’s current attributes will be. Such attributes include appearance (skin tone, ethnicity and hair color), statistics (age, height, weight and measurements) and style (tattoos, scars and body hair). Further information for Xbox One and PS4 will come via the official website in the coming weeks. Perhaps this could be a reason why I have been locked out of the beta or even the good boy's club? You should be fine getting in to the beta. There were a few builds that we did not put into a complete build that was made available to beta testers. If you haven't gotten into the beta, you can still get into the game and download the complete version. The "member's only" request feature will allow you to make public requests to friends to bypass the waiting room on pre-order. I am so done with seeing my 97 account be on a first name basis with people, just as I was told I couldn't join them a week ago, most people including ea are idiots, and I don't even play online. This is a dumb reason for one to not sign up, I still don't get why. I mean just so you can make a crazy membership request. Whatever I see why that would help me. lol, try telling that to the guy who was waiting for 10 days last time. Being able to make insanely lopsided requests can be helpful
